

SOME BIG COUNTIES.

California Has One Bigger Than Four Eastern States Put Together.

East of the Rocky Mountains there are only twelve counties in the United States containing more than 5,000 square miles. Not one of these is in New York State, the largest county of which, St. Lawrence, covers only 2,900 square miles. One of the twelve is Aroostook, the forest county of northern Maine, between New Brunswick and the St. Lawrence. Another is Dade County, Fla., which includes the everglades of Florida along the Atlantic coast, and has an area of 5,600 square miles and a total population of less than 900. Cherry County, Neb., in the extreme northeast of the State, with the Snake River dividing it in half, has an area of 5,600 miles. Three northern counties of Minnesota lying south of Manitoba and west of Lake Superior, Beltrami, Itasca, and St. Louis, have respectively 5,940, 5,430, and 5,800 square miles. The last county includes the important city of Duluth, which the first has a population of 30,000 and the last only of 750. The population of Duluth is 35,000.

The two counties of Idaho, Bingham, containing the lava fields and Idaho, Gem, containing the Payette River, contain more than 10,000 square miles each. Two counties, Idaho, Gem, and El Paso, have more than 8,000 square miles. Peckham, in the extreme northwest corner of the State on the Rio Grande, has 6,700. El Paso, which adjoins it on the Rio Grande, has 9,750. One county of Colorado, Arapaho, has an area of 6,000 square miles. This is still more notable from the fact that it has a population of 160,000, including the city of Denver, the second largest city in the state, with an area of 6,000 square miles.

MAJORITY COMPARED.

Their Increase and the Increase in the Whole Vote in the Last Thirty Years.

A popular majority of over one million votes for the Republicans in about half the States of the Union at the recent election seems abnormally great when compared with the past achievements of the Republican party in the line of majorities and it seems some of those to break the record in this regard. In point of fact, however, the increase in voting strength of various American constituencies has been so noxious to the fact that an actual majority of 60,000 is regarded from the point of view of percentage, less in many cases than a majority of 10,000 twenty years ago.

In the State election of 1863 the Republicans made, as they did this year, a vote of 1,000,000 against a Democratic majority of 147,000 last month. In 1863 the total vote was 1,000,000, while in 1864 it was 700,000. The Republicans carried Massachusetts in the Presidential election of 1860 by a majority of 100,000. This year the Republicans carried 600,000, while the Democratic vote was as large as them. In the State election of 1861 New York was carried by the Republicans by 107,000, while the Democratic vote was 100,000. Majority was 10,000, the total vote of the State having increased in the meanwhile from 400,000 to 1,275,000.

In 1863 at least the recent election was entirely unprecedented. The Republicans carried Pennsylvania by a majority of 241,000, they never before had so large a majority in any other election. These figures tell all the records, and overtopped, too, even the Democratic figures in Texas, the high-water mark Democratic majority in the Lone Star State having been 184,000 in 1860.
